ART SHOWS & EXHIBITS

AMONG ALL THESE TUNDRAS Until Aug 30 Esker's new exhibit Among All These Tundras showcases contemporary art by Indigenous artists from the Arctic. Collectively, the works communicate "Arctic concerns towards land, language, sovereignty and resurgence" while sharing experiences with colonialism and its ongoing legacies. Free. Esker Foundation, 444, 1011 - 9 Ave SE. www.eskerfoundation.com

HORSES IN SPORT Learn more about the history of horses in sport in Canada in this exhibit, which features events in which horses play an integral role including the Calgary Stampede, Canadian Derby and the Olympic and Paralympic Games. Browse unique artefacts, including a 35 million year old prehistoric horse. Canada's Sports Hall of Fame, 169 Canada Olympic Rd SW, 403-776-1040. www.sportshall.ca

KENT MONKMAN: THE RISE AND FALL OF CIVILIZATION Until 2020 This room-filling installation is a poignant reminder that the North American bison, a source of sustenance for Indigenous people for thousands of years, was nearly hunted to extinction by European settlers in the 1800s. Glenbow, 130 - 9 Ave SE. www.glenbow.org

LADYLIKESS Until Jan 2020 Glenbow is celebrating women's art in their new Ladylikeness exhibit, which focuses on historical portraits of women by women. The works include photographs, paintings and drawings, with some of the art dating back to the 18th century. Glenbow, 130 - 9 Ave SE. www.glenbow.org

MONEY AND CALGARY: THE CITY'S HISTORY OF NUMISMATICS Until Jul 20 Numismatics is the study and collecting of currency. In Money and Calgary: The City's History of Numismatics, Nickle Galleries highlights some of Calgary and Canada's earliest and most prominent collections, donors and collectors including Calgary's historic Numismatic Society and the University of Calgary's renowned Numismatic Collection. 410 University Crt NW, 403-220-7234. library.ucalgary.ca/nickle

NICK CAVE: FEAT Until Sep 22 Not to be confused with the musician by the same name, Nick Cave is one of America's most acclaimed contemporary artists. Glenbow's Nick Cave: Feat exhibition is the first in Canada to be solely dedicated to his work, which explores issues surrounding identity and social justice — specifically race, gun violence and civic responsibility. His human-shaped sculptures, called soundsuits, are saturated in colour and texture, creating an optical delight that can be enjoyed by viewers from all walks of life. Glenbow, 130 - 9 Ave SE. www.glenbow.org

PORTRAITS Until Aug 24 A portrait is not necessarily a straightforward depiction of a person — it can expand to convey the likeness of an individual's physicality, personality or mood. Portraits at the Alberta Craft Gallery delves into a myriad of portraiture from quirky self-portraits to special memories of loved ones and iconic personalities with the work of 33 fine craft artists from across Canada, including traditional beading by Sharon Rose Kootenay Cherweniuk and Micah Adams' intricate metal work. cSPACE King Edward, 280, 1721 - 29 Ave SW, 587-391-0129. www.albertacraft.ab.ca

THE RADIO LOUNGE Until Summer 2020 Personal radio and audio devices have changed a lot in the last century, from large wooden consoles that were part of the living

WOVEN INTO THE LAND

Visitors to the Leighton Art Centre can add their dreams, wishes and life affirmations in to the interactive art installation Vital Lines by customizing ribbons and weaving them in to the structure. Created by Calgary francophone artists Sabine Lecorre-Moore and Patricia Lortie, who make up the artistic duo known as Conversation, Vital Lines was created specifically for the Leighton Art Centre's landscape. "Vital Lines was inspired by the Leighton land and, in many ways, the land has guided us through the design and construction of the project," says Lecorre-Moore. The installation pays homage to Barbara Leighton's fibre art practice, and the Leighton Art Centre is located at A.C. Leighton and Barbara Leighton's original home on 80 acres just outside of Calgary near Millarville. See and contribute to Vital Lines until September 29. www.leightoncentre.org

Every Wednesday, bring your art supplies to Rumble House and create art on the spot using three random themes — or watch it happen. The art will be auctioned off at 9 pm. www.facebook.com/rumblehouseliveart
